It's the beginning of the top of the third inning, fifth game of the 1956 World Series, and so far Don Larsen's pitching a perfect game. When he gets to the pitcher's mound, he gets poised to pitch, but then stares at home plate for a long time. Then he motions for the catcher, Yogi Berra, to come out to the mound.

When Yogi gets to the mound, Don says, "For Christ's sakes, Yogi, button up your fucking fly. I'm getting mixed signals."

Friedman really wants to fuck his wife in the ass, and after he's tried everything he can think of with no luck, he decides to get help from a psychologist.

The psychologist says, "There's one sure-fire solution to your problem. There's a very special herb that only grows in the Amazon ... it's very hard to find, but if you go there and find it, it'll be well worth it, because it'll solve your problem."

Ten years later, after an incredible journey which includes being caught by cannibals and almost dying of malaria, Friedman goes back to the doctor and says, "Here it is, here's the herb."

The doctor says, "That's terrific. I'll prepare it. Come back tomorrow."

The next day when he gets there the doctor hands Friedman a little bottle filled with green liquid.

Friedman says, "Okay, how do I use it, Doc?"

The doctor says, "It's easy. You put the bottle on your wife's night table, and then you say, 'Honey, would you grab that little bottle for me?' And when she turns around and bends over to grab it, boom!, you fuck her in her ass."
