Partying till 2am at a string of Mayfair haunts is a typical night out for a young Royal.

But it was the Duchess of York who hit London's club scene on Thursday night, showing the younger generation how it should be done.

Sarah Ferguson, who turned 50 last year, dined at celebrity favourite restaurant Cipriani, with owner Giuseppe Cipriani, before continuing the party at 17 Berkeley Street.

Partying the night away: Giuseppe Cipriani joined the Duchess of York for dinner at his restaurant on Thursday before drinking at the 17 Berkeley Street club. Though she is believed to be dating the Norwegian Findus Foods magnate Geir Frantzen, the pair were seen leaving the club hand-in-hand at 2am.

By contrast, her elder daughter, Princess Beatrice, 21, enjoyed a rather more demure evening out - dinner at Covent Garden fish restaurant J. Sheekey - with long-term boyfriend Dave Clark.

Despite the early hour, the Duchess looked fresh-faced; but by holding hands with Cipriani, she sparked a rumour that they could be more than just good friends

Dressed in an appropriately royal blue double-breasted coat and flat knee-high boots, she looked every inch the princess she is. Clark, too, looked polished in a white shirt and suit.

Beatrice is currently doing a degree in history at Goldsmiths, University of London, while Clark works for Richard Branson's Virgin Galactic.

Her sister Eugenie, 19, is currently doing a Combined Studies degree at Newcastle University.

While the future is bright for Beatrice and her younger sister Eugenie, things are looking less financially promising for their mother, whose recent film deal appears to be jeopardy.

HandMade Films, the company behind Withnail And I and Lock, Stock And Two Smoking Barrels, signed an agreement to turn the Duchess's childrens' books into an animated TV series.

Last week, however, it asked for its shares to be suspended due to uncertainty over its finances.
