"education" is the problem all right; there is all this stuff about the "educated mind" that has dominated the situation; unfortunately "training" got a bad rap; otherwise you are right

I do make my living in training of course its easy to tear down. i would suggest you find an editor that is less angry... in your first non negative presentation you already talk about what the faculty hates. ... maybe we should title it TRAINING vs, Education. lets stop talking about education. learning greek , and talk about jobs, decisions ,judgments that most people have to make every day.. I think to take on the battle of reforming EDUCATION is a loser. Call it something else.

I am and always have been a radical; I think the world we have created sucks;; we dont talk about this much because it has never been your issue but, jail and what you have been through, will radicalize anybody; so now that you have suffered injustice you may be just a little more interested in understanding why injustice happens; one of my answers has been exactly what you just pointed out -- do judges really learn to judge and and they have to think about what they have done? what about lawmaker? my curriculum is meant to make people into thinkers first and actor second
