Michael

I will remove all here from this exchange unless they request to stay on .

I will study your manifesto before our dialog .

We both use " I " in our exchanges as do all humans .

We are presumably referring to conditioned minds.

Minds conditioned by different systems of thought or inquiry - philosophical scientific religious theological or mythical usually never agree.

What is mind prior to conditioning . What is it that knows it's conditioning ?

More later

All love

Hi Deepak,

I watched it in its entirety on my drive home from L.A. back to Santa Barbara this afternoon. This is the best exchange I've heard yet on this subject, and now I know precisely the error in analysis, which I will reveal to you in our dialogue in NYC January 16! As you know I wrote skeptically about Hoffman's Interface Theory of Perception, although admittedly it is a good argument.

By the way, I wonder where you stand on moral realism Deepak? I claim that moral truths are discoverable in the same manner as physical laws in nature. I suspect you disagree, but maybe not. Here's a reply to a physicist I wrote, published this week in the journal Theology and Science...
