F,
Both Joi and I think you'd find this guy super interesting. He lives in Boston. If you want to meet him, let me know & I'll intro via email.

Jeremy Rubin is a junior at MIT studying Electrical Engineering and Computer Science. Currently Jeremy is organizing the MIT Bitcoin Project, an initiative he started with Dan Elitzer to give $100 is bitcoin to every MIT undergraduate (and much more, including a competition and a conference). Jeremy first came onto the Bitcoin scene with Tidbit, a system to replace web advertisements with cryptocurrency mining (currently fighting a NJ subpoena). He is the lead developer for HackMIT, and a Researcher at the MIT Media Lab in the Viral Spaces group. Jeremy has previously interned at Jane Street Capital and Nokia.
