Importance: High

Hi Toni. The interview I was telling you about when we spoke a little bit ago finally confirmed the commencement time for our interview tomorrow - 10am. This is an important interview, finally meeting the (celebrity) individual associate with this role - first, meeting with the Chief of Staff, which is the position I am interviewing for, sign the NDA and general confidentiality-esque agreements and get a more concise description of the job. Then we will be taken to the residence so I can meet / interview with this individual.

This will take every bit of the three hours of time requested of me; and for a $200k+ base salary and my own staff, I am sure you can understand my interest in focusing on this timeframe.

At the same time, I am just as interested in your client and respect his time. Is there any way I can accommodate him in another way?

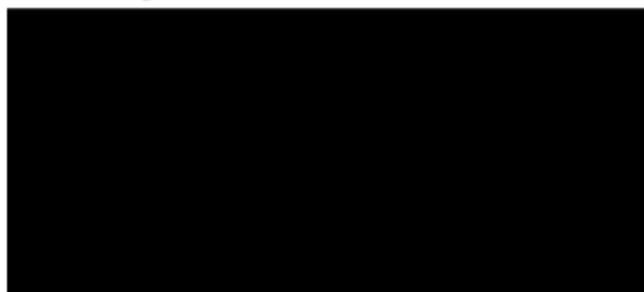

1. I can Skype with him anytime tonight, at his convenience.
2. Or, if the window you gave me earlier is the only time that works, the later the better...

For the purposes of discretion and so that I may fully focus on our discussion, I would much rather do this interview in my home office.

Thoughts?

Thank you.
Niccole
