The majority of it is like plywood that we'll just lean against the wall. It really won't take up much space.

Hi Rick,

The garage is pretty tight but I would say the wall closest to the street.

Also he can put some in the mud room itself if he needs more space.

Hi guys,

One of my guys (Greg) will be dropping the materials at the house around 10 this morning. Will Gloryanna be there to open the garage door. Lastly, is there one wall in particular in the garage where you'd like me to put the materials.

Thanks

Lesley,

Okay getting back to the paint...I know you said white but how about we bring a little color in there and liven it up. It will make the bench and the shelves pop off the walls. I think the bench is going to be cute. It should be white with the the dark stained bench top. But how about I surprise you with a color for the walls just like they do on some of those cheesy TV shows. The only difference is I won't use purples-teals-or-oranges...I'll keep it tasteful.

Hi Lesley,

If all goes well I am planning on starting your work on Monday. I'm in receipt of the 5 Hooks from RH and I know the wood brackets have been made and have shipped but I haven't received them yet. Fingers crossed I'll have them by the end of the week. Is Monday still good for you? Also, is there a spot in the garage where we can store the trim materials over the weekend. I'll just need one wall and it shouldn't take up much of a footprint. Lastly, is it okay if we start at 8am?

Thanks,

Rick

One last thing, we'll need the paint colors for the walls. I was planning on staining the bench top a dark walnut to contrast the balance of the beadboard and trim which would be white.
