Adam Engle Announces His Retirement: Presidential Search Initiated by Board

It has been public knowledge for many months that Adam Engle has announced his decision to retire in January 2012 after a distinguished quarter century leading the Mind & Life Institute. Co-Founded by His Holiness the Dalai Lama, neuroscientist Francisco Varela, and Mr. Engle, the work of MLI has blossomed. Today, the impacts of MLI are being felt worldwide, and a rich variety of emerging related organizations is evidence of the importance of this pioneering work.

The Board of the Mind & Life Institute has engaged Robert M. Fisher, Ph.D. (Rusher Loscavio Executive Search, San Francisco) to conduct an international search for highly qualified candidates for the Presidency. This is a seminal moment in the history of this remarkable organization; we urge you to peruse the career prospectus/position description found at the link below, consider your own interest and qualifications, and also to share this with anyone you know qualified for this position. Together with His Holiness the Dalai Lama, Adam Engle, Francisco Varela, and the international scientists, scholars, and contemplative practitioners who have built MLI and its collaborating institutions to their current level, the next President of MLI will find a healthy and growing organization capable of promoting rigorous research, creative applications of new learning, and the development of innovations that can amplify the impacts of this interdisciplinary field. After perusing the career prospectus, contact [REDACTED] to express your interest or to suggest colleagues qualified for the position. All inquiries and expressions of interest are in strict confidence, of course.
